Sample translations of Polish Language Church Records

- Birth Record Page 1, Page 2, Page 3 (requires DjVu plugin - see Technical Page)

This section previously provided links to sample translation pages of Polish language Napoleonic records provided on another site by Jack Bowman. That site is no longer available. We are able to recover those documents and are now offering them here for your use.

Mr. Bowman's Polish Translations on this website.

Jack Bowman's translations also make reference to a Polish Word List which is found on the Family Search website.

Sample translations of Russian Language Church Records

- SGGEE has created its own set of help files for translating the Napoleonic style of Russian language records. These pages include translation forms for numbers, months, and places. They also include samples of records from the Lublin Lutheran Parish.
- Though we believe the above to be most helpful, Jack Bowman (see note in Polish section above) also created some samples of Russian translations and we offer them here for you - Births - Marriages - Deaths.

Alternate Given Name and Alternate Surname Lists

- SGGEE Alternate Christian Name List

Find the equivalent spelling or variation of a name in English / German (pdf format).

- Christian Name Variations

This Polish language site is an excellent source for alternative names in a variety of languages such as Latin, French, German and others. Though in Polish, you do not need to know it to use it. Click one of the letters along the top to go to the name you want. For example, you are looking for Jerzy so click on J to find names starting with that letter. Then click the little "page" icon beside the name to go to the variations list where you will see that the equivalent is George along with other variant spellings. Similarly, click on Boguslaw and find that it is the same as Gottlieb and has no English equivalent. One minor problem with it is that you can only start with a Polish name to find its equivalent.

- SGGEE Alternate Surnames List

(not substantiated)

Find the equivalent spelling or variation of a surname as found in the SGGEE Pedigree database, and from other sources. There are now two different lists - substantiated and not substantiated. That does not mean that the unsubstantiated list is of no value. It does mean that the names listed there have not been substantiated by someone using more than just personal family records or family lore.

- SGGEE Alternate Surnames List

(substantiated)

This list was reviewed and updated by our member Antje Mass. It represents valid alternates that can be verified from records sources, factual translations of surname meanings, etc.

- The etymology and history of first names of many different languages including Polish, German, and English.

- Alternate Christian names

- Alternate Surnames (un-substantiated)

History Books

Here you will find information about local history books which have been compiled for numerous communities in western Canada. Includes an index of surnames found in them.

Parish Records Indices (PRI)

This searchable database contains names and other vital data extracted from the indices of original Polish and Russian Civil Registration documents.

Pedigree-type Databases

The pedigree databases combine data from original record extractions with that supplied by members. The information is merged into a gedcom style database allowing you to quickly establish relationships. You will also find temporary databases here which have not yet been merged but which will be in the future. This allows us to quickly provide you with material from work in progress without having to wait for the merge to take place.

Member only versions of the St. Petersburg Volhynian birth, marriage and death records

The public area of our site allows you to search the St. Petersburg extractions. This page offers advanced search techniques that may allow you to find people that you couldn't find with a standard search.

Special version of St. Petersburg database to help identify the location of a village based on the route travelled by the Pastor

Can't find the location of an ancestral village with a common name in Volhynia?

Many villages in Volhynia have the same name so how can you know which is the right one? The results page of this search lists all the registrations in sequential order as they appeared in the original document. The pastors collected this information from the local Kantors as they travelled their circuit. From this, one can deduce that the order of villages on the page would be somewhat sequential as well. By looking for a group of three or four villages, one can ascertain the correct location for the village with the common name.

Use this special search tool to help you figure out which of the many Alexandrowka, Dubrowka, etc. was the actual residence of your ancestor.

St. Petersburg records for Podolia

Podolia is the province in Ukraine immediately south of Volhynia. There was a certain amount of cross migration into and through this region in both directions between Volhynia and the Black Sea / Bessarabian settlements. Some missing family links from either direction might be found in these Podolia records.

(spreadsheet - requires software that can read .xls files)

This file is near complete but may have some additions in the future. It was compiled by member Linda Pauling and consists of German immigrants from Russian Poland heading primarily to the States of Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Ohio with a few also to Michigan. It is NOT all encompassing but is specific to those areas. The info was extracted using the Stephen Morse, Ellis Island, and Ancestry.com websites by doing specific searches for Russian Poland and certain larger towns. There are slightly over 1000 names on the list.

Information about Society operation, minutes of meetings, and guidelines for Committees can be found here.

Using the Search Tool

We encourage you to review instructions for using our search tool, especially if this is your first time. They will provide hints and tips for optimizing your search, thereby ensuring a better chance of getting results. We also suggest that you consider the following suggestions for names that may have been altered due to language variances.

1. The records in this database are generally Polish records. As such, there are many Polish spellings of both surnames and given names. In order for you to find data, you may need to know the Polish equivalent of a German name (Gottlieb= Bogumil, Johann= Jan, etc.). Refer to our Translation Helps page for further assistance with that. There are also some spellings which may have been anglicized by the extractor, such as Elizabeth and Edward which are neither German nor Polish spellings. So you may need to try several different ways of spelling a name to find it.
2. Always use as few characters as possible in your search, as the sieve that nets the results may be too tight if you spell out names completely. For instance, always search for Elisabeth using only El in the given name field, as that will find Elisabeth, Elizabeth, Elzbieta, etc.
3. Even though Polish and German names are often markedly different, you can sometimes be successful by typing in the part of the name that is the same in both languages. For instance, the given names Charlotte and Szarlotta have similar parts, and a search for a given name that contains "lott" (without the "" marks) will return both versions of the name."

Database Searches

A. MPD- a linked data file that shows pedigree data

1. Koenig- note the alternate names shown for both surname and given names.
2. Look at the links for sources (one per family), parents, children
3. Rode- note Czerwinski
4. Search for spouse name Grams- 545 hits

B. SGGEE001r10 (just uploaded this week)- getting close to 200,000 names that are from original records in Poland- mostly Lutheran, but some Catholic records as well. Note that this database does not use the locations guidelines that we have developed, nor does it utilize the alternate given names, and does not always use the alternate surnames.

C. PRI- notice that this database is a Polish parish records database where each line of data is unlinked. It is just a listing of data from parish register indexes.

This data is also exactly as shown in the registers- no conversions of names

Note the film number to guide you to the image

D. St. Petersburg records for Volhynia, Kiev and Podolia- again a database where each line of data is not linked to other data in the database.

1. This data is supposed to be exactly as found in the original records, but I suspect that there is some editorializing of names.
2. Search for birth records for mother Schiewe
3. Note the recording year that is part of the film number. This will guide you to the online images at <http://pilot.familysearch.org/recordsearch/start.html#p=0>

Maps- Poland and Volhynia

1. There are a series of maps for both Poland and Volhynia
2. There is a searchable database of village names for each map series.
3. Each map is a pdf file, and each can be searched for the village name using Adobe Reader

Our own Gazetteers of Volhynia and Poland

1. We have developed guidelines (mostly Frank Stewner has) that show how to name and then find a village in Poland or Volhynia
2. We will have gazetteers to show how to change the village you seek into a location you can find on a map.
